NOTE.

THE second volume of the statements prepared in the Census Office having been completed before the other two volumes have gone through the Press, it has been thought advisable to publish this single volume without waiting for the completion of the others. This appears the more desirable, as Volume II., now issued from the Press, contains in an abstract form the main body of the information collected at the enumeration of the 18th of January, 1872.

The Census in question is the first—at all events in those provinces, and I believe is the first in India—in which an attempt has been made to classify the population by ages. In the statements comprised in Volume II. full details of the population classified by religion, sex, and age will be found. In addition, are shown the number of houses in which this population resides, the houses built by skilled labour being distinguished from those of more simple construction; the number of persons of either sex belonging to the land-owning families and to the agricultural community; and the number of persons of either sex following occupations which are not included in the above designations. The number of persons who are able to read and write, and who have so been recorded in the original Census returns, is also shown, classified according as they are—under 12 years of age, or between 12 and 20 years of age, or upwards of 20 years of age.

The statements in the earlier pages marked with Roman numerals give the population of the province, the revenue divisions composing the province, and of the thirty-five districts contained in those divisions. The pages numbered with Arabic numerals contain similar information for each of the pergunnahs into which the districts are divided. The last pages in the volume contain similar returns for each of those towns in the province of which the population exceeds 50,000 in number. Volume III., which is now progressing towards completion in the Press, contains the results of the enquiries made, by order of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, in regard to the existence of female infanticide in the various castes and clans in the different pergunnahs throughout the province. Volume I., which has not yet been sent to the Press, will contain the various tables prescribed by the Government of India, and those further details which the mass of information collected at the enumeration of 1872 has put at the disposal of this office. It would not be convenient at the present moment to enter into any discussion as to the results of the last Census. The returns are not yet all tabulated, a large number of them have not yet been printed, and it would be impossible to wade through the voluminous manuscript returns. It may be as well, however, to note briefly what are the main results brought out by the Census of 1872.

Making allowance for the transfer of Ajmere from this province, to which it no longer belongs, the movement of the population in the seven years that have elapsed since the enumeration of 1865 may thus be stated:—The total population has increased from 29,684,347 to 30,769,056. The total male population has risen from 15,911,790 to 16,406,833, while the females have increased from 13,772,557 to 14,362,223. It will thus be observed that, while the total population of both sexes has increased at the rate of 3·65 per cent., the two sexes have not increased in identical proportion, for, while the females have nominally added 428 to every 10,000 of their number since 1865, the males apparently have only added 311 to every 10,000 of their number within the same period. The rate of increase shown by the total population of both sexes is almost the same as that observed in the United Kingdom between the years 1851-1861, but considerably less than the rate of increase current between 1861-1867 for the same country. Below is shown what were the annual rates of increase in the United Kingdom for those years :—

Annual Rates of Increase (per cent.)

Country.	Period.	Persons.	Males.	Females.
United Kingdom,	1851-1861	·56	·53	·59
Indian Empire,	1861-1871	·83	·79	·86
N.-W. Provinces,	1865-1872	·52	·44	·61

But if the contrast in the movement of the population regarded in relation to sex is thus remarkable, it is much more so when one comes to notice the progress of the two great religious sections of the community, the Hindoos and the Mahomedans.

The Hindoo population of both sexes has increased from 25,495,871 in 1865 to 26,569,068 in 1872, thus increasing 4·2 per cent. in the seven years that have intervened. On the other hand, the Mahomedans have remained almost stationary, the total Mahomedan population of both sexes standing now at 4,189,348 against 4,188,476 in 1865. There is thus a difference of only 872 persons on a population of over four millions in a period of seven years.

It is possible that the apparently stationary position of the Mahomedans may be traced back to a variation in the methods pursued in the classification of the population in 1865 and 1872. At all events, cases have come to my notice in which sections of the population that were classified as Mahomedans in 1865 have in 1872 been shown as Hindoos.

The subject will be more fully discussed in the General Report.

Another remarkable variation in the progress of the population is to be found in the movement of the two sexes, both in the Hindoo and Mahomedan portions of the community. These variations will be best seen from the subjoined statement, which shows that Hindoo males have increased only 3·7 per cent., while Hindoo females have increased 4·7 per cent. In the Mahomedan section the contrast is singularly remarkable, the males having fallen off 1·1 per cent., while the females have increased by a nearly corresponding amount, viz., 1·3 per cent. Such variations as these throw considerable suspicion on the accuracy of the returns.

The general nature of the occupations of the people may be gathered from the following figures. The total number of landowners is 2,045,940 ; of agriculturists other than landowners, 15,330,027 ; while the number of persons pursuing avocations not connected with agriculture is 13,387,580. Of the whole thirty millions residing in the province, the number of persons who have been entered in the original Census returns as able to read and write is 532,194, or rather more than one in every sixty of the population. But there is no doubt that the number of females who can read and write is very much under-stated, as only 586 females are shown under this head out of 14,362,223. Of the male sex, 531,608 are entered as able to read and write ; 350,875 of these are recorded as being over 20 years of age, 107,324 as between 12 and 20, and only 73,409 as under 12. The small numbers of the latter class are, when contrasted with the returns furnished yearly by the Director-General of Instruction, some index of the incompleteness of the educational statistics gathered in the last enumeration.
